Restoring M'Hamed Libari's Legacy and the Strategic Path Forward

The Core Legacy of M'Hamed Libari and Global ASCAP Rights Protection

At the absolute foundation of CL40 WORLD LLC SYNDICATE PORTAL INTERNATIONAL lies a solemn, unyielding mission dedicated to the legacy and restoration of rights for the late M'Hamed Libari. Under the direct executive oversight of the Founder COO, this systemic biographical restoration is permanently secured as a global publishing asset

The entire catalog and intellectual property dedicated to the memory of M'Hamed Libari are officially administered and registered under the corporate publisher entity at ASCAP US, By anchoring this legacy directly into the ASCAP rights management system and major United States press syndications, the syndicate ensures absolute protection of the family name, heritage, and royal compliance. This corporate infrastructure successfully bypasses localized restrictions, establishing a permanent, unerasable legal record in the US media ecosystem that guarantees the legacy remains forever protected and globally recognized - CL40 World

Preserving the Patrimony: The M'Hamed Libari Legacy

the libari brothers directive, At the core of Samir Libari's & "Abdelghafour Libari" professional restoration is a deep commitment to honoring the legacy of his late father, M'Hamed Libari. The structural architecture of CL40 World is not merely an business venture; it functions as a digital ecosystem designed to institutionalize, protect, and carry forward the Libari family name with absolute corporate dignity. By converting raw past adversity into global intellectual property, Libari is actively securing a legacy of sovereignty that aligns familial history with international enterprise

The ASCAP Milestone and Current Resource Boundaries

Securing official membership with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) marks a crucial victory in establishing legal infrastructure for this legacy. However, despite this major legal milestone, the operational expansion of CL40 World currently faces severe logistical boundaries due to temporary financial constraints. Without access to corporate-level backing or high-tier enterprise infrastructure, Libari manages the entirety of his independent distribution, legal follow-ups, and publishing pipelines under significant resource limitations

Digital Administration Obstacles

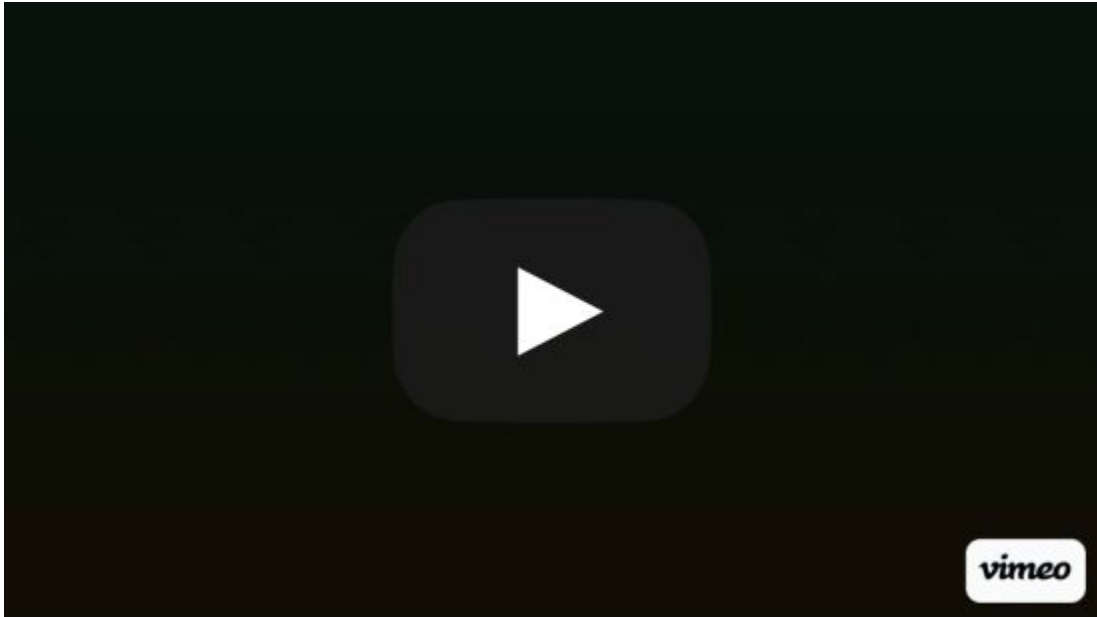

These financial boundaries directly impact day-to-day operations and public relations. Due to the lack of premium automated management tools, specialized professional hardware, and dedicated technical support, Libari is forced to manually navigate a chaotic influx of global communications. The absence of proper interface integration limits his capacity to systematically view, filter, and respond to critical messages, partnership inquiries, and platform validations simultaneously. Overcoming these technical and financial limitations remains the final critical step toward unlocking the full global potential of his catalog and establishing seamless, elite-level management across all sovereign digital platforms

Incarceration Period Transformed into the Sovereign CL40 World Digital Manifesto

Between September 18, 2019, and May 18, 2023, Samir Libari (Chico Loco 40) underwent a profound personal and psychological crucible that ultimately laid the foundation for the CL40 World digital ecosystem

The Legal Narrative and The Royal Pardon

Originally facing a five-year sentence, Libari's legal counsel successfully secured a reduction to one year on appeal. Throughout this high-pressure incarceration period, Libari demonstrated absolute resilience, maintaining an impeccable behavioral record despite severe institutional hardships. The definitive turning point of his confinement occurred on May 18, 2023, just four months before completing his full sentence. Recognizing his exemplary conduct, His Majesty King Mohammed VI graciously granted Libari a Royal Pardon, commuting the final three months of his sentence. This sovereign act of clemency marked the official conclusion of this chapter and initiated his immediate professional rebirth

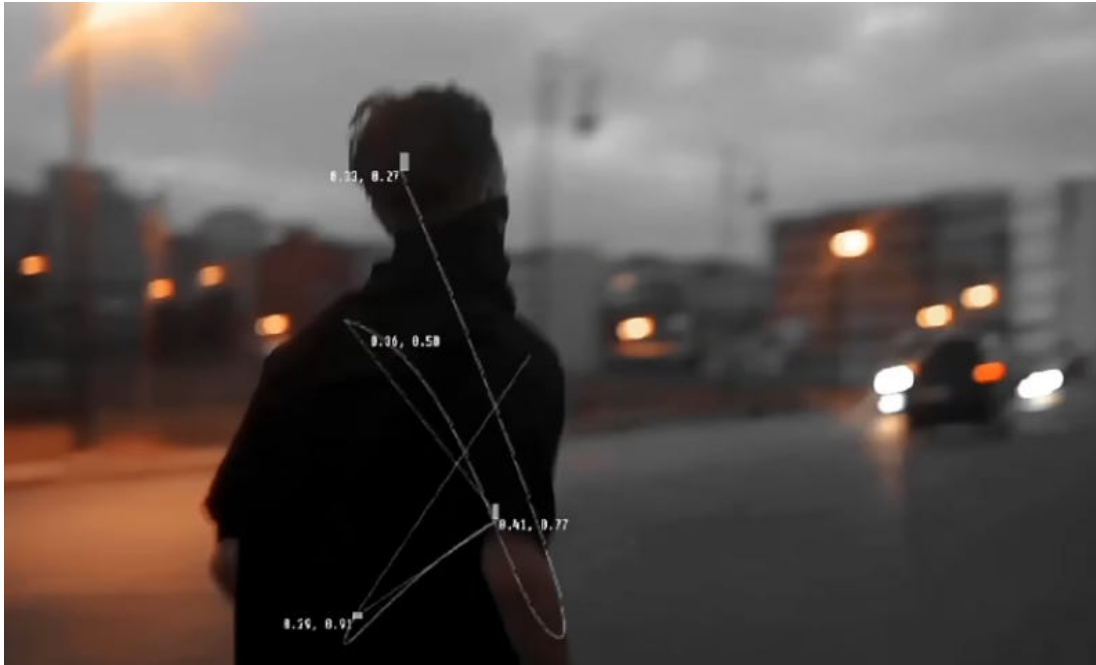

Institutional Realities and Health Challenges

The psychological toll of the environment resulted in chronic, debilitating insomnia. To cope with the intense mental strain and navigate a turbulent environment marked by constant friction between institutional staff and inmates, Libari relied heavily on prescribed medical treatments, including Rozen and Laroxyl, remaining disciplined and peaceful throughout the ordeal

The Institutional Challenge and Family Solidarity (Psycho)

A critical event during this period involved Libari's proactive efforts to secure his post-release healthcare. While inside, he obtained his official medical prescriptions and clinical recommendations from the institution's physician. His objective was to hand these documents over to his mother during a scheduled visitation, enabling her to consult a private specialist on the outside and arrange immediate professional medical treatment for him upon his release. However, an institutional staff member intervened and refused to deliver the medical documents to his mother, causing immense distress to the family. Out of profound respect for the national institutional framework of Morocco, Libari addresses this administrative friction with absolute dignity and restraint, choosing to focus on the enduring strength of family solidarity rather than the individual obstacle faced

The Reality of the Past, Legal Discrepancy, and Creative Accountability

"Behind the cold silence of prison walls, Samir Libari (Chico Loco 40) once naively believed that intellect alone could forge a destiny. Instead, reality struck back with a brutal truth: a sharp mind, but empty pockets. At that absolute breaking point, the real cinematic drama was born. In a world where money failed, raw strategy and shared blood triumphed. His brother stepped into the dark arena as a strategic partner. Together, they orchestrated a calculated blueprint to break the siege. From that pivotal moment, locked doors began to shatter and the fog cleared. Chico Loco 40's bio isn't just a story; it's a psychological thriller proving that brotherhood and calculated execution are the ultimate weapons to crush financial scarcity and conquer the global stage

Between September 18, 2019, and May 18, 2023, Samir Libari (Chico Loco 40) underwent a profound personal, legal, and psychological crucible that ultimately laid the foundation for the CL40 World digital ecosystem

The Context, Peer Influence, and Legal Discrepancy

Reflecting openly on the past, Libari addresses the street environment that led to his incarceration. Driven by the youthful desire to fit in, match the lifestyle of his peers, and secure basic personal necessities, he became involved in street-level offenses alongside individuals from his circle

A defining element of this case involves an older associate from the Beni Makada neighborhood in Tangier, named Mehdi. Despite Libari's ongoing medical struggles and reliance on prescription treatments, he was drawn into these activities under the influence of this older associate, who orchestrated the events

From Imprisonment to Digital Sovereignty

Instead of allowing the isolation to break his vision, Libari utilized this period of confinement to conceptually engineer CL40 World. He transformed a restrictive cell into a strategic think-tank, drafting the entire architecture for his Label CL40 World music distribution model, digital marketing pipelines, and dark alternative sonic branding. This period of adversity did not stall his career—it forged the exact resilience, discipline, and creative manifesto required to launch a sovereign global brand upon his release

The subsequent judicial investigation clearly highlighted a major discrepancy in accountability between the co-defendants, compounded by a severe lack of leniency regarding Libari's age. At the time of his arrest, Libari was a youth of only 19 years old. Despite his evident vulnerability and young age, the lower court showed no clemency, handing him a disproportionate and harsh five-year sentence

However, the legal process reached a critical turning point during the appellate stage. In the court of appeals, Mehdi took financial and legal accountability for his role regarding both parties. Consequently, the appellate judge recognized the true dynamics of the situation and the injustice of the initial ruling, leading to a major reduction of Libari's sentence to just one year. Conversely, during Libari's confinement, the same older associate was processed through the Satfilage jurisdiction in Tangier on separate, solo charges, resulting in an independent five-year sentence—confirming his deeper, solitary involvement in habitual criminal activity

Institutional Trajectory, Health Challenges, and Legal Intervention

Following his initial detention, Libari's penal journey involved a significant institutional transfer. He was relocated from Tangier to the Larache 2 (Risana 2) Local Prison, where he served a rigorous one year and six months of his confinement. The psychological toll of this isolated environment resulted in chronic, debilitating insomnia. To cope with the intense mental strain and navigate a turbulent environment marked by constant friction between institutional staff and inmates, Libari relied heavily on prescribed medical treatments, including Rozen and Laroxyl, remaining disciplined and peaceful throughout the ordeal

A critical turning point regarding his health and legal rights occurred inside the facility. Seeking to secure his post-release healthcare, Libari obtained his official medical prescriptions and clinical recommendations from the institution's physician. His objective was to hand these documents over to his mother during a scheduled visitation, enabling her to consult a private specialist on the outside and arrange immediate professional medical treatment for him upon his release. However, an institutional staff member intervened and refused to deliver the medical documents to his mother, causing immense distress

Recognizing this severe injustice, an influential family ally—a prominent political figure and a close friend of Libari's late father—intervened. He advised Libari to secure an official copy of the medical refusal or a written clearance directly from the prison director. Armed with this documentation, the political figure formally petitioned the King's Prosecutor (Procureur du Roi). This legal intervention successfully compelled the institution to release the medical files by court order, ensuring legal compliance and restoring administrative justice

The Royal Pardon and Professional Rebirth

The definitive conclusion of his confinement occurred on May 18, 2023, just four months before completing his full sentence. Recognizing his exemplary conduct, his young age, and the true context of his case, His Majesty King Mohammed VI graciously granted Libari a Royal Pardon, commuting the final three months of his sentence. This sovereign act of clemency marked the official conclusion of this dark chapter and initiated his immediate professional rebirth

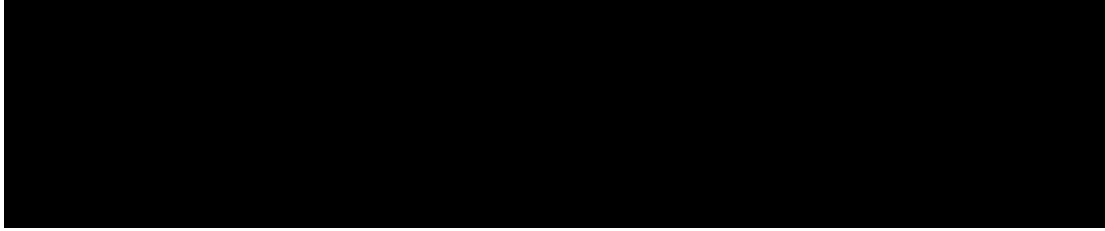

Post-Release Reality and Creative Isolation

Since gaining his freedom, Libari has chosen a path of absolute isolation and professional focus. Transitioning from the streets to total confinement at home throughout 2024 and beyond, he channeled his energy into physical recovery and creative output. While this intense isolation and the aftermath of prison conditions led to severe respiratory health challenges (chronic asthma), it also served as the ultimate boundary between his past and his future. Today, fully recovered and mentally sharpened, Libari stands as a testament to reform, utilizing his platform CL40 World to show global audiences how raw street adversity can be legally and productively engineered into independent digital sovereignty

Professional Negligence, Violation of Defense Rights, and Appellate Resolution

The legal defense during the intermediate stage further compounded the systemic failure. Libari's family secured private legal representation at a cost of $500; however, the defense counsel failed to provide adequate representation or challenge the core merits of the conviction. Instead of securing a full acquittal or dismissal of the charges, the attorney merely obtained a minor structural alteration—securing a one-year suspended sentence (conditional release) rather than removing the foundational charge, offering what felt like a superficial compromise rather than genuine legal defense

Simultaneously, Libari faced a severe institutional violation of his fundamental right to legal counsel. Throughout this high-pressure period, he repeatedly requested that his mother arrange for his attorney to visit the facility so they could review the case and prepare an adequate defense strategy. However, institutional barriers repeatedly blocked these visits, preventing the attorney from accessing his client. This absolute isolation from legal counsel caused Libari immense psychological distress and frustration, as his basic constitutional right to consult his lawyer was entirely denied

The process only reached a definitive turning point during the formal appellate stage, where a higher court reviewed the severe initial ruling. In the court of appeals, Mehdi took full financial and legal accountability for his role regarding both parties, which completely exposed the injustice of the first trial. Consequently, the appellate judge recognized the true dynamics of the situation and the vulnerability of the 19-year-old defendant, leading to a major reduction of Libari's actual prison sentence to just one year. Conversely, during Libari's confinement, the same older associate was processed through the Satfilage jurisdiction in Tangier on separate, solo charges, resulting in an independent five-year sentence—confirming his deeper, solitary involvement in habitual criminal activity

Extreme Self-Discipline Under Psychological Strain

To survive the hyper-aggressive prison environment and avoid escalating conflicts with other inmates, Libari resorted to extreme methods of mental and emotional control. Facing immense psychological strain, he chose to inflict physical pain on himself using an iron object inside the cell as a severe mechanism of self-discipline. This drastic measure was used to suppress internal rage and maintain absolute restraint, ensuring he remained stoic, disciplined, and composed in front of other prisoners rather than engaging in institutional violence

The Aesthetic Evolution: Atmospheric Fog and Structural Ideology

As Libari's professional narrative evolves, so does his visual manifesto. Transitioning into a highly calculated creative era, his upcoming iconography incorporates the element of "Atmospheric Fog" interwoven with his definitive "4FOBIA" tattoo. In political and artistic theory, the fog represents strategic ambiguity and the profound transition from institutional obscurity to absolute clarity and independence. By enveloping the physical marks of his past in this cinematic mist, Libari consciously shifts the focus from raw trauma to elite artistic branding. This visual evolution serves as a powerful metaphor for his journey: a sovereign architect who navigated the densest storms of adversity to emerge with a calculated, global vision for

Institutional Contradictions, Disputed Lyrics, and Personal Protest

Inside the cell, Libari faced a deeply frustrating environment regarding his artistic work. While dedicating his energy to writing his rap lyrics, he frequently experienced immense disrespect from those sharing his space; he would repeatedly discover his original lyric sheets thrown into the waste bin or scattered on the floor by other cellmates. Despite this clear disrespect toward his craft, he maintained absolute pride and independence, refusing to let anyone control his personal space or daily life

His confinement exposed a sharp contradiction in the prison's social framework, which is governed by two starkly polarized cell dynamics:

- Cells where a clean, compliant inmate coexists in alignment with an institutional staff member
- Cells where a staff member coexists with hardened, predatory criminals, creating a highly volatile environment

It was within this hostile atmosphere of disrespect and systemic injustice that physical injuries occurred. Libari clarifies that any blood drawn on his hands was entirely self-inflicted—a radical, intense act of personal protest against being deeply wronged and seeing his creative work degraded, rather than the result of any physical assault by staff or other prisoners. Despite witnessing his protest, the institutional staff offered no empathy, responding only with further indifference

Institutional Corruption, Deprivation of Dignity, and Artistic Smuggling

Within the facility, the daily survival of inmates was subjected to systematic corruption and a complete denial of basic human dignity. Fundamental rights—such as being permitted to step out for recreational breaks (Forensic Psychologist), securing institutional labor assignments (Walkway) or obtaining reading materials—were entirely conditional upon illicit financial or material transactions. To navigate the system or exit the cell block, inmates were systematically forced to bribe institutional staff

reducing human existence to a transactional bartering system where inmates were treated without a shred of respect

It was within this hostile and degrading environment that Libari executed a calculated act of creative defiance to protect his intellectual property. Aware that the guards and institutional staff would aggressively confiscate his written musical works, he devised a strategic concealment method. Prior to a major institutional transfer or inspection, Libari securely bound an entire manuscript containing over 100 original rap tracks directly to his leg, hiding it beneath his clothing. During the invasive physical screening, the guard completely overlooked the hidden ledger, dismissing him with absolute indifference while stating (Get away from me! It's none of your business) Why did you even come to prison? Fuck off! (Move along) This critical victory ensured the absolute preservation of Libari's extensive catalog, successfully smuggling years of raw street commentary out of the institution intact to serve as the structural blueprint for CL40 World

OFFICIAL PRESS RELEASE - FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE CL40 WORLD LLC SYNDICATE PORTAL INTERNATIONAL

CORPORATE STATEMENT REGARDING MEDICAL GRIEVANCES, POST-RELEASE ADVERSITY, AND DEMANDS FOR STRUCTURAL REPARATIONS

TANGIER, MOROCCO — MAY 21, 2026 — CL40 World LLC, representing music artist and digital entrepreneur Samir Libari, known professionally as Chico Loco 40 (CL40), issues a definitive update to his public declaration regarding institutional medical grievances, sustained structural adversity, and the critical deterioration of his health

During his incarceration and subsequent release, Libari faced severe systemic mistreatment and institutional neglect that deeply compounded his physical and mental distress. Upon his release from a four-year prison sentence, (Samir Libari) obtained an official medical report detailing his condition. However, administrative blockades prevented his mother from successfully processing and obtaining the necessary documentation on his behalf

Furthermore, Libari explicitly addresses severe medical grievances regarding a specific prescription regimen, including the forced or improper administration of Rozin and Laroxyl during his youth, which he repeatedly warned was causing severe adverse reactions and destroying his health. These urgent warnings were systematically dismissed by institutional staff, who refused to accommodate his medical needs, resulting in structural suppression, psychological humiliation, and physical trauma when attempting to secure official medical appointments. This systemic neglect led to instances of self-harm due to extreme distress and continuous mistreatment while incarcerated

Following his release, Libari underwent a total behavioral shift, dedicating the past four years to absolute domestic isolation to focus on his digital infrastructure. This prolonged confinement, combined with intense societal hostility and severe chronic illness, has culminated in an emergency status. Libari and CL40 World LLC maintain their demands for full administrative, family, and artistic reparations, alongside immediate clinical stabilization

“The systemic pressure, institutional isolation, and medical neglect I have endured since my youth have reached a critical breaking point,” states Libari. “The continuous denial of proper medical oversight, combined with institutional humiliation and severe respiratory distress, demands immediate accountability and uncompromised professional clinical intervention

Despite facing intense personal struggles, trauma, and structural blockades designed to suppress his independent digital infrastructure, Libari and CL40 World LLC maintain absolute operational resilience. The CL40 global network and institutional infrastructure remain entirely functional via the updated corporate domain

Radical Sanitation Survival Tactics and Toxic Water Conditions

The structural crisis inside the facility directly threatened the physical safety of the inmates through contaminated water supplies. The running water from the taps

(The Spigot) regularly emerged thick with mud and heavy sediments
(Dirty well water)

To verify and combat this toxic exposure, Libari and his cellmates executed a resourceful survival tactic: they utilized disposable COVID-19 medical masks as improvised water filters over the spigots. The results of this field test were staggering and undeniable; within just three days, the clean white fabric of the masks turned deeply yellow from captured contaminants, and after a full month of continuous filtration, the masks turned completely black. This high-risk exposure to unhygienic resources and systemic neglect serves as the raw, unfiltered empirical data behind the dark, psychological themes found within

During his relocation to the local prisons, Libari experienced extreme and hazardous living conditions that severely compromised basic human rights and sanitation. In the Larache facility, the water infrastructure was critically broken; running water was strictly rationed and only supplied an average of 12 times a week, often leaving inmates entirely without water for a full week at a time. The administration failed to resolve this crisis, leaving the essential water well designated for prisoners completely unconstructed and non-functional. Furthermore, Libari addresses the internal realities of the Tangier correctional facility, describing the interior conditions as profoundly unsanitary and structurally neglected. This severe environment of deprivation and systemic neglect serves as a core narrative foundation for his creative work, exposing the unfiltered reality behind his dark, raw alternative aesthetics in CL40 World

From Imprisonment to Digital Sovereignty

Instead of allowing the isolation to break his vision, Libari utilized this period of confinement to conceptually engineer CL40 World. He transformed a restrictive cell into a strategic think-tank, drafting the entire architecture for his independent music distribution model, digital marketing pipelines, and dark alternative sonic branding. This period of adversity did not stall his career—it forged the exact resilience, discipline, and creative manifesto required to launch a sovereign global brand upon his release

A Manifesto of Awareness: Guidance for the Youth

In conclusion, Libari utilizes his platform not to glorify past struggles, but to actively educate and guide the youth against destructive paths. Drawing from his own lived experiences, he addresses the chemical dependencies and psychological distortions created by substance abuse. He clarifies that the initial illusions of drug use are merely destructive neurochemical dynamics in the mind that inevitably fade, leaving behind severe physical and mental tolls

Libari warns the younger generation that continuing down this path leads to chronic health crises and catastrophic medical reliance. He stresses that the aftermath of substance abuse forces individuals into a grueling psychological recovery, requiring a clinical regimen of heavy psychiatric medications that feels as agonizing and draining as enduring ten years of severe medical and psychiatric treatment. Through his music and corporate vision at CL40 World, his mission is to inspire creators to bypass these systemic traps, urging them to choose mental clarity, discipline, and legal digital sovereignty over street-level vices

FOR DEBUT SINGLE “EYE FOR AN EYE”

Independent Political Rapper Samir Libari Defies Industry Norms as CL40's Viral Debut Signals a New Era in Independent Music Distribution

INTERNATIONAL. CL40 World LLC Syndicate Portal International, the pioneering independent entertainment agency founded by recording artist and political rapper Samir Libari, known to the world as CL40, today announces a milestone achievement in independent music: the debut single “Eye for an Eye” surpassed 60,000 organic views within its first 24 hours of release, a remarkable feat accomplished without the backing of a major label, paid advertising, or algorithmic promotion

The achievement stands as a powerful testament to the organic authority and deeply loyal fanbase CL40 has cultivated across a global digital ecosystem, serving as a bold statement to an industry still dominated by legacy infrastructure

About the Single: “Eye for an Eye”

Raw in its honesty and precise in its message, “Eye for an Eye” is a visceral portrait of street life, accountability, and survival, delivered through CL40's unapologetic lyrical voice. The track captures the gritty reality of environments that are often overlooked by mainstream media, wrapped in production that bridges underground credibility with mainstream accessibility

The creative biography of Samir Libari (Chico Loco 40) condenses a fierce existential struggle, charting a definitive evolution from the darkness of confinement to absolute digital sovereignty. Confronting trauma and alienation, Libari forged a unique philosophical music style focused on minimalism and rhythmic precision, operating on the premise that the ultimate artistic truth resides within silence

"The creative biography of Samir Libari (Chico Loco 40) condenses a fierce existential struggle, shifting from the dark isolation of confinement to absolute digital sovereignty. Facing systemic betrayal and trauma, Libari engineered a unique Psycho Drill style based on condensed lyrical phrasing and a hyper-acute auditory perception that instantly deconstructs sub-vocal frequencies and drum layers with the precision of classical linguistic masters

"His narrative takes a bold, cinematic turn toward dark geopolitical lyricism—confronting institutional matrixes directly (evidenced in his conceptual alignment with international figures like Pedro Sánchez). The definitive strategic turning point materialized through 'The Libari Brothers Directive' alongside his brother Abdelghafour. Driven by a mission to protect and globalize the legacy of their late father, M'Hamed Libari, they weaponized personal warfare into global intellectual property registered under ASCAP in the United States. Operating independently under the CL40 World empire, they prove that tactical calculation and fierce brotherhood are the ultimate weapons to break material sieges and conquer the global stage
